The Uranium Producers of America (UPA) applauds President-Elect Trump's choice of Governor Rick Perry to serve as Secretary of Energy and Scott Pruitt to run the Environmental Protection Agency. Both candidates are strong leaders and excellent choices as we look to strengthen our domestic energy production, while maintaining a clean and safe environment.

UPA looks forward to working with the new Administration to roll back excessive regulations and reduce the amount of uranium the government is dumping into the market. The U.S. was once a global leader in uranium production, but we've lost half our workforce since 2012 and now import more than 92 percent of the uranium used to power our nuclear reactors. With less headwinds from our federal government, we are ready to put Americans back to work and ensure we have a strong domestic uranium industry.
